NFL increases game day security
Stadiums around the league to enforce new rules

By Laura Richard

Fans of the National Football League can look forward to enhanced security procedures when they attend NFL games this year. The NFL implemented the new measures prior to the start of the 2011 season.

Even though they were put into effect before the season kickoff game between the New Orleans Saints and Green Bay Packers game on Thursday, Sept. 8, hype over the new security measures didn't occur until after an incident at the MetLife Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J. during a New York Jets – Dallas Cowboys game on Sunday, Sept. 11.

The incident happened during an altercation between a Cowboys fan and three other fans in an upper section of the stadium. South Carolina resident, Leroy T. McKelvey, 59, managed to sneak a taser past security and allegedly used the stun gun on the three men. The victims suffered minor injuries, and McKelvey was arrested and charged with possession of a stun gun, possession of a weapon for unlawful purposes, and three counts of aggravated assault. He was later released from the Bergen County Jail on $22,500 bail, according to cnn.com.

In accordance with the NFL's “Best Practice” policies, the enhanced security specifically means adding pat-downs from the knees to ankles, in addition to the waist up pat-downs that have been in place for several years. They are hoping that the increased security measures will help keep all NFL fans safe.

In New Orleans, the first game at once due to her business. Valladares had been robbed in her home before and yet was still very trusting of her customers. Valladares, who was a teacher in San Pedro Sulo, Honduras before she moved to the United States over 30 years ago, had a great amount of affection for children in her community. In addition to normal arrival time to allot for the increased security. Champion Square was even opened an hour early, at 9 a.m., rather than its normal 10 a.m. opening prior to the noon kickoff.

To be played at the Superdome with the security enhancements was the Saints vs. Chicago Bears game on Sept. 18. Prior to the game, fans were warned to arrive at least half an hour prior to their normal problems associated with the extra pat-downs. Most complaints revolved around getting caught trying to sneak food or drink into the Dome. “They found my beer and wouldn't let me bring it in,” complained one fan, who wished to remain unnamed. “I’ve always brought a few bottles of beer in my socks, and now I’m stuck paying $8 for each beer.”

Superdome security said the items they are searching for haven't changed, the search has just become more thorough. Items not allowed into Saints games include, but are not limited to, outside food and drinks, cameras with a lens longer than six inches, noisemakers, laser lights, and weapons or contraband of any type.

On Monday, Oct. 3, Delgado’s Irma Thomas Center for W.I.S.E Women (Women In Search of Excellence) hosted 13 delegates from Saudi Arabia as part of the US State Department’s International Visitor Leadership Program. The participants represented a wide range of entities including King Saud University, the Saudi Cancer Foundation, Saudi Educational and Training Establishment, as well as multiple non-profit societies that work with women, disabled persons and breast cancer awareness. Melanie Deffendall, director of the W.I.S.E. center, and Sociology Professor Raymond Dennis participated in the hour long informative session. Ideas and information were shared concerning how the center works as well as who it serves, and what services are offered.

“We are humbled you picked our center to visit,” Deffendall said. “We are small, yet we serve about 2,000 students per semester. Women come in with a variety of problems-they could be victims of domestic abuse, they may not have any food, or they could be having trouble staying in school due to a variety of reasons.

We think that helping to solve small problems can sometimes be the key to a student staying in school.”

The delegation, consisting of 12 women and one man, shared how their organizations serve their respective communities in the Middle East. Counseling women who have been affected by domestic violence was a main topic discussed. Services like housing assistance, job training, and re-marriage assistance are some of the positive things also being provided for women by these groups.

An interesting cultural difference was brought to light when Nawal Mohammed Al Sharef spoke about the Mawaddah Philanthropy for Divorce Issues, where she is the general manager.

Divorced women in The Kingdom carry a stigma that can affect them their entire life. Al Sharef’s foundation addresses this by teaching skills that lead to financial independence as well as providing tuition assistance for those who would like to attend school.

Issues effecting women, children and families span all borders and ethnicity. Everyone can benefit from information-sharing sessions with people who are all working to tackle the same global issues.

“We are different foundations all working together to enrich the community,” one delegate said.

The delegation consisted of:

Abdulrahman Al Shahrani, Administration Manager with the Saudi Cancer Foundation explained the work he does in the eastern region of the country. During October, Breast Cancer Awareness Month, the foundation ramps up its educational efforts by placing kiosks in large stores informing women about self-examination, as well as distributing pamphlets.

Archbishop Philip Hannan laid to rest

A funeral procession through the city bids farewell to a favorite son

By Erin Krall

On Wednesday, Oct. 5, thousands of mourners lined the streets of New Orleans to bid Archbishop Philip Hannan, who died Sept. 29 at the age of 98, a final farewell.

A horse-drawn carriage brought the archbishop from Notre Dame Seminary through Mid-City and finally, to St. Louis Cathedral.

The St. Augustine Marching 100 Band led the procession that included priests, choirs and the current Archbishop Gregory Aymond.

A funeral Mass was held the following afternoon when the archbishop was interred beneath the Sanctuary of the cathedral alongside eight previous bishops and archbishops.

Philip Hannan was the 11th archbishop and served over the Archdiocese of New Orleans for 23 years.

New childcare center opens at Delgado

By Shannyn Reidlinger

Before Katrina, Delgado had two children’s centers on the City Park Campus. One was the old President’s House behind Building 7 and the other was in Building 2. Both were flooded and the President’s Home was torn down because of extensive termite damage.

It’s been six years since Delgado has had a day care facility on its campus. With the dedication and opening of the Joseph “Joey” Georgusis Children’s Center, students and faculty will be able to bring their children to Delgado Daycare. “This children’s center will be a butterfly bringing much needed life to this community,” Acting Chancellor Deborah Lea said.

Named for the son of benefactor Joseph Georgusis, the center broke ground on Nov. 19, 2008.

Construction was completed in the summer of 2011. The 8,500-square-foot, state-of-the-art facility was designed by Burgdahl & Graves, Architects. The center reserves 85 percent of its space for children of Delgado students. The remaining space is for faculty and staff dependents.

The center will serve 83 young children, ranging from 6 weeks to 4 years old. The center will not only provide child care services, it will also provide clinical training for students in the Care and Development of Young Children (CDYC) program. Parents of the young children are often faced with finding and affording dependable child care. The US Department of Education offers a reimbursement to needy students for a portion of their out-of-pocket child care expenses.

The Joey Georgusis Center Children’s curriculum will focus on social, emotional, physical, and cognitive childhood development in a safe, high quality learning environment for Delgado students, faculty and staff. Behind the wheel, under the gun
Safety a matter of training and re-training

By Sean Paul

With the steady rise of vehicle deaths and vehicle accidents around the country, local and federal laws about vehicle operations have drastically changed over the last few years.

Cars themselves have changed, but drivers may not have updated and changed to meet the new demands of road safety. According to safety research, vehicle accidents normally involve one of these: road conditions, equipment failure, or other drivers for accidents. These are some of the reasons for accidents involving the driver below.

- The principle of driving survival recognizes that most crashes result from errors made by “good” drivers who often have years of experience behind the wheel. Maybe they picked up bad habits or forgot important fundamentals, and there’s a good chance they – and probably you, too – were trained improperly for contemporary vehicles, traffic patterns, driving environments and laws. www.ouraaa.com

- The odds of a teenage driver having an accident are high. According to Students Against Destructive Decisions (SADD) research, teens spend 44 percent more hours driving each week in the summer than during the school year. Furthermore, 16-year-olds have higher crash rates than drivers of any other age. Motor vehicle crashes are the leading cause of death among 15- to 20-year-olds.

- According to the U.S. Department of Transportation almost 3,500 drivers in this age group died in motor vehicle crashes in 2006, and an additional 272,000 were injured. In the same year, drivers aged 15 to 20 accounted for 12.9 percent of all drivers involved in fatal crashes and 16 percent of all drivers involved in police-reported crashes. www.statefarm.com

- Everyone has been angry at another driver for one reason or another, but some drivers let their rage overcome them. By tailgating another driver in anger or speeding past another driver only to pull in front of them and brake, these road “ragers” cause many needless car accidents each year. www.seriousaccidents.com

In case you’re wondering what SOI is, it stands for Student Opinion of Instruction, and every fall semester, after midterms, students are asked to evaluate the instructors of the classes they are taking.

This fall, from Oct. 19 - Nov. 9, students will rate their professors. This rating has an impact on faculty promotions, so don’t just bubble in an interesting design on the evaluation sheets. But do take the time to voice your opinion of your instruction. There’s even space at the end to write in your comments. If you’re doing the evaluation online, it really matters that you take the time to do it before Nov. 9.

Minor League player awarded Golden Glove award

Compiled by Dolphin Staff

Former Delgado College Craig Westcott was recently awarded the inaugural Minor League Baseball Rawlings Golden Glove award, which recognizes the top nine defensive players in minor league baseball.

Westcott is currently a member of the San Jose Giants. He was a member of the 2006 and 2007 Delgado baseball squads, including the Dolphins' 2007 trip to the Junior College World Series. Following his time at Delgado, Westcott transferred to Belhaven University in Jackson, Miss, prior to his being drafted by San Francisco.

Westcott becomes the first recipient in San Jose Giants history as well as the only recipient in the California League this season. Westcott was a defensive catalyst for the Giants this season posting a perfect 1.000 fielding percentage in 25 games. Westcott also led all Giants pitchers this season with 25 assists and 16 putouts in 41 total chances. He is the only pitcher selected to receive the award this season in all of Minor League Baseball.

"All of Minor League Baseball would like to congratulate the winners of 2011 Rawlings Gold Glove Awards," said Pat O'Conner, Minor League Baseball President.

"To be honored with such a prestigious award is quite an accomplishment and exemplifies excellence in the field. Minor League Baseball is also pleased to team with Rawlings Sporting Goods to bring back such a great tradition as the Rawlings Gold Glove Award."

Lockout’s real pain felt beyond owners and players

By Associated Press

(AP) — NBA owners will lose $1 million on average for every game canceled because of the lockout, and players will lose an estimated $350 million a month.

The pain, though, may be more acute for 100,000 fans than for millions of viewers. They couldn't get tickets watching games it would have televised.

The strongest in the NBA's small-market cities. In Salt Lake City, a Marriott hotel was taking place in our country right now.’’

A lengthy lockout will be felt strongest in the NBA’s small-market cities. In Salt Lake City, a Marriott hotel was taking cancellations for about 40 rooms previously booked by the Memphis Grizzlies the night of Nov. 2. Tyson Lybbert, director of sales and marketing for the Salt Lake Marriott City Center, said each game brings between $5,000 and $10,000 to the chain.

Without a lockout, basketball already would have been back by now. The exhibition schedule was to have opened last Sunday, and even preseason games can bring big crowds to restaurants and bars near NBA arenas.

Jim Couch, city manager of Oklahoma City, was concerned for restaurants, hotels and volunteer groups in his city. The Thunder are coming off their most successful season since relocating from Seattle, reaching the Western Conference finals last year behind NBA scoring champion Kevin Durant, and have developed one of the league's most passionate fan bases.

"What I'm more concerned about than anything else is the momentum that the city has gotten, disrupting the momentum with the Thunder. It was a special year last year with the Thunder, and I think everybody was looking forward to continue that,' Couch said. "I think it's almost a love affair between the community and the team, and you hate to disrupt that.'

Business went on for the league's partners. ESPN was scheduled to show seven games during the opening two weeks and plans to replace them mostly with college football and basketball games. TNT will rely on its regular prime-time lineup to fill the six games it would have televised.

Adidas, the league's official outfitter, and fellow sneaker giant Nike said they remained committed to basketball and could seek additional exposure at the collegiate or international levels.

Stern and union president Derek Fisher of the Lakers expressed disappointment for fans. Players and owners had the luxury of knowing just how complex the issues were and had two years to prepare themselves financially for a moment that Fisher said was "what we anticipated would probably happen.'

"This is a big blow obviously to our fans, most importantly,' he said. "They don't have a voice in this fight so far, but we hear them loud and clearly. They want basketball, we want to play basketball, and we're going to do the responsible thing and try our best to bring them basketball as soon as we possibly can.'
International Art World Descends on New Orleans For Prospect.2

Delgado campus gallery will host Polish artist as part of contemporary art biennial

By Erin Kral

From Oct. 22 through Jan. 29, 2012 New Orleans will be at the center of the world’s contemporary art scene. Prospect.2 is the major installment of Prospect New Orleans biennial series. Curator Dan Cameron presented Prospect.1 in 2008-2009 when 24 venues hosted artists from over 23 different countries as well as 10 Louisiana based artists. Prospect.1 was a more toned down event which ran in 2010-2011. It is no small feat coordinating a project of this magnitude, but when all is said and done come October, we as New Orleanians need only walk out our front door, and a Prospect exhibit will not be far away. All exhibits are free and open to the public, with coordinated, set hours available for viewing.

The Isaac Delgado Gallery on the third floor of Building One is in on the action thanks to Gallery Director Brenda Hanegan. “I contacted Dan Cameron and offered up our gallery,” said Ms. Hanegan. “He came to look at the space, and we hosted multiple local artists during Prospect 1.5.”

For Prospect.2, Delgado will host Polish artist Mr. Pawel Wojtasik, in what is sure to be a full sensory exhibit. Mr. Wojtasik will exhibit a work entitled “Below Sea Level”, a 360-degree panoramic video and photograpic installation portraying post Katrina New Orleans. “We’re building a circular wall for his work to be projected onto,” see Prospect.2 page 10

Brad Pitt as a prankster? Behind the scenes with Chris Pratt

By Chelsey Thrapp

Chris Pratt, a Minnesota native, was only 19 when he was discovered by actress Rae Dawn Chong. Pratt had moved to Hawaii with friends, and was discovered by actress Rae Dawn Chong. Pratt had moved to Hawaii with friends, and was found by her on the beach. He was charmed by her sense of humor, and it just so happened Chong was looking for the lead character for her horror/comedy, Cursed Part 3, in 2000. After scoring the leading role, Pratt started auditioning and began booking roles immediately. He had a guest spot on USA’s The Hustreux in 2000. Pratt then landed a leading role on The WB’s Everwood in 2002. He signed for NBC’s Parks and Recreation in 2009 and was re-signed for the second season. Chris was recently seen in the movie, Take Me Home Tonight (2011) as Kyle Masterson and is one of the ex-boyfriends in the new movie, What’s Your Number; which just came out Sept. 30.

Chris Pratt is in the top box office movie, Moneyball, as baseball player Scott Hattenberg. Moneyball, the true story of Oakland A’s general manager Billy Beane’s successful attempt to put together a baseball club on a budget by employing computer, Chris Pratt as Scott “Hatteberg in "Moneyball." sentence generator Peter Brand to analyze draft players, also stars Brad Pitt and Jonah Hill.

The Dolphin went behind the scenes with Chris Pratt about his role in Moneyball. How did you prepare for your role?
I had to work a lot with professional baseball players for training and I had to lose weight.
Did you know anything about baseball before this film and how it was working with professional baseball players?
I knew a little only because I played Little League ball when I was a kid. But it really cool working with professional players because these are the guys who are the best in world at what they can do and I’ve always had that dream of wearing that professional baseball uniform. It was a dream come true.
Did Brad Pitt pull any pranks on you or anyone on set?
He didn’t really pull any on me but he did, actually, on Jonah Hill. Jonah Hill had a golf cart that was driving around in. Brad wrapped the whole thing in pink cellophane. And when he turned the key on, he had this speaker hidden somewhere, so every time he turned it on it would play the Wham song, “Wake me up before you go, go.” So he basically made the “Wham Mobile.”

Since this is a major sports movie, what was the difference between this movie and your other movies?
There wasn’t a huge difference. The tone of the project was different. You become very close to everyone and grow a bond like family.
Did you have anything in common with Scott Hattenberg?
I had limited baseball knowledge, but what we had in common was that when I played Little League I played catcher. So I can relate, but not on a professional level.
Can you tell us about Bennet Miller and how he helped you along in the filming process?
Yeah, Bennet is one of those particular, genius types. He is really smart and he is very thoughtful with everything he says; he definitely thinks before he speaks. He likes to mess with people. I didn’t really realize how good of a director he was until after I saw the movie. He is brilliant. On set he is not as vocal as a lot of directors would be. I like the fact he just lets us go for it and do what you want to do. One time, he came up to me, thinking he would say something to me, but he wouldn’t and then he would just say one word and that’s all I needed.

Is there a difference between a movie set and a TV set? There is definitely a big difference. I would say it’s (TV) like a doggy set and sometimes you would look into the camera. While I was doing Moneyball, I remember looking into the lens and the director was like, did you just look into the lens? Movie making is at a slow pace when shows are fast pace. It’s really run and gun on T.V., where as a film you’re setting up every single shot and you do your scene over and over again.

Germania Hall Oktoberfest will be at Germania Hall, a Marien Hall, in Mid-City. The $30 tickets include German food and drinks. It’s free for kids 10 and under. The event is on October 29 from 6:30-10:30 p.m. at 4415 Bienville St.

"Etiquette Dinner" is on Nov. 11 from 5-8 p.m. A full course meal will be served for students and guests to teach the do's and don'ts at the dinner table. The cost is $25 for students and $10 for guest. For more information call, (504) 762-3119 or e-mail at jjohns1@dcc.edu, Westbank campus.

Ghost in the Oaks is the Friends of City Park’s annual non-scary, family-friendly Halloween event. On Friday, Oct. 22 in City Park’s Carousel Garden Amusement Park and Storyland. Activities include crafts, games, stories, trick or treating, children’s entertainers, and unlimited amusement park rides. Early admission is 6-7 p.m. and $20 per person. General admission is 7-10 p.m. and $15 per adult, $12 per child 3-years and older. Costumes are encouraged!

The Student Government Association encourages faculty, staff and students to support breast cancer awareness by wearing pink in support of Breast Cancer Awareness Month on Oct. 19. Stop by the breast cancer information and education table in the City Park, Student Life Center at 11 a.m., to learn how to spot and prevent cancer and to “Make a change” by emptying your pockets at a donation collection tables located throughout the college. Proceeds will go to the American Cancer Society.

Students and their families are invited to enjoy themselves at ‘Family Fall Fest’ on Oct. 20 from 4-7 p.m. There will be games, music, food, Spacelands and a costume and dance contest. The event is free for Delgado students on the Westbank campus.

The Hidden Closet

A treasure for fashion lovers

By Arielle Buxton

The uptown side of a city is often defined as being one of the most elegant, upscale spots in the city. It’s like the inside of your dream home. Full of culture, taste and history. The streets are lined with swanky nightclubs that play sweet, melodic sounds of jazz, with the lingering aroma of roasted foods pouring from the doors of a nearby eatery. The people walking down the street, riding bikes and hanging out make you feel so at peace and relaxed; just like home. Most times, when you’re uptown, you want to invite the whole experience and have a good time, but it’s possible to miss some of the gems that are uptown’s hidden spots.

Even with uptown being a high-traffic activity area for locals, there are still many places that go unnoticed everyday. For a fashion lover, uptown’s Magazine Street is the ultimate hot spot for fashion and social networking. There are many distinct windows of fashion boutiques with the coolest, trendiest clothes of the season that you see while driving along the street. It makes you want to grab a friend and explore all the amazing places that you can in one day. Magazine Street is a girl’s best friend, and there are so many options to choose from, you’ll get lost trying to find your way back to the little boutique tightly squeezed between restaurants and cigar shops that you passed by while driving. Located almost a block from Napoleon Avenue, the doors of a bright green space sits snug in its own little spot with a door and tiny steps at its entrance. Feels like you’re walking into your very own closet of dream clothes.

You walk in and immediately feel a whole new atmosphere than what you felt before you turned the knob. You first notice the stylish looks of the store mannequins and then the most bright, enthusiastic faces of Armoire’s sales associates. They invite you to the store with such a warm greeting and confidence that they know you’ll find what you need in the store, without a doubt. You feel like a celebrity because of the store’s trendy edge and young Hollywood wardrobe collection. You also get a first-hand shopping experience of all the season’s most current trends and the most adorable jewelry from different designer names that are familiar to the fashion savvy. All the walls are covered with fall trends in sizes ranging from 0-20. I know you’re wondering, how could such a small space hold so much? One of the great things about this boutique is that they stay on trend. Their brand is all about getting the fashion before the fashion happens. So, they are constantly changing and ordering more merchandise as designers create them. As a highly competitive industry such as fashion, Armoire stands on its own in the New Orleans area. Unlike other boutiques, prices are very reasonable and fit for the college student. You can snatch a new one-shouldered dress for under $50 or a trendy top for under $20 on their sales racks. The prices will surely catch your attention, let alone the amazing trinkets you’ll discover while shopping.

As you walk around the circle of the little play area for fashionistas, you begin to notice pieces of clothing and accessories that all stand out and are different from what you’ll normally find in some boutiques. You can spot cool things like a ring with a clock design wrapped in silver or a pair of cat eye frames next to a shelf of tiger tooth earrings and stone rings. Armoire Boutique is a college student’s dream closet indeed. The boutique targets a young, fabulous, trendy and stylish young woman who sets trends and likes to be the first to see Hidden Closet, page 10

“Don’t Worry About the Rest of the World”
By Kevin Jamal McAden

I remember growing up as a child, I would always put myself before others. I would always worry about what other people thought and said about me, but I never understood why I was so concerned about other people’s problems when they really didn’t care about my problems. Sometimes it can feel like there’s only you in the entire world and that you and your select few of friends are the only ones that matter. Well, however strongly you believe in the aforementioned statement you must realize that the world doesn’t stop just for you and whoever else you have in your little fantasy. It’s never as simple as people want to believe, but I’m going to help you make it a little bit simpler. You must choose your stance and stick with it. Personally, I say that the rest of the world only exists when they are a part of the equation. Meaning, if it doesn’t have anything to do with anybody else, use your judgment.

The one time method of doing right by everyone isn’t the way to go anymore as you cannot possibly please everyone and yourself at the same time. It will seem selfish, but in the end you no other end happens. Happy is the best option. Self-preservation means making yourself happy too, and if you don’t that then what are you doing? Being too concerned with what others think is unhealthy to say the least, because you can bet that the same people are worried about themselves before you.

Try to asset your situation according to how you feel and how you feel only. I know that may seem very harsh, but it is the absolute truth. It’s too difficult to appraise the mass who are serving their own goals. Sometimes you may want to do it for noble reasons and that’s perfectly fine. Noble or not, you are your own best friend and that is perfectly fine because no one knows you better than yourself. Helping can have the same effect as hindering sometimes when it isn’t done right. People are selfish by nature and that is something that everyone has in their blood. You must try not to try to be when it’s beneficial to something we want which, in essence, is selfish.

Don’t worry about the rest of the world because they are not worried about you. Stand your ground and reach for your goals. You should want to see yourself doing greater without anything or anyone hindering you. So don’t take this message as a steak to the heart, but as an open heart filled with love, wisdom and knowledge. Believe me, at the end you will feel better and so would your family, friends and the world.

Finding Your Study Style
By Arielle Buxton

In college, there are so many things that you will learn and experience everyday. Some things you experience can be truly rewarding and can give you a great college career. But, there’s always that little dark cloud hovering over your head come test time. Things get gloomy and all your sunny days just got washed away, like that! It is so easy to panic in moments like these without being aware that you are panicking. The best thing to do is relax and try to get things done in your own way. Customize the way you prepare for tests so that you feel more confident about taking them. As a student, it is essential that you find your study style because it’ll truly help you in ways that you never thought would be possible.

Okay, so you have midterms coming up soon. What do you do? A common question to many college students as they hear that exams are only a week away. Don’t go jumping out the window! The courage to take tests will come naturally as you work through ways of finding a style that is right for you. If you feel like you need to study in a group, alone, in a quiet place, in a relaxing place, or a resourceful one; learn how to do it to become a better student overall with these helpful tips.

Studying Alone
If you’re the type who likes to study alone, there are places located all around campus where you can study quietly. There’s the library located in building #10 right across from the student life center where there’s also free tables and spaces for students to study in between classes. The library includes useful resources like books, internet, periodicals and much more. There are also helpful online resources that your school offers that you can gain access to through your blackboard account. Net tutor is one of the online tutoring portals that helps student with coursework and other resources.

Studying with a group
Many people prefer to study with a group of people. The advantage is knowing that there are other people who need to practice the material puts you at ease when you have to prepare for a big exam. Each person in your group should answer questions to test themselves accordingly. As you practice over and over, everything will become more familiar to you and you will better understand the information.

Studying in a quiet place
Hmmmm...there’s nothing like silence when you’re trying to study. The smell of coffee beans and the serene feel of a relaxing atmosphere makes you feel at home. For good study habits, it is essential that there are no outside distractions that will deter your quiet time. Read over the material until you feel confident that you have it all down packed. Test yourself by making your own questions and write your answers on a sheet of paper. When you are done, go back to your work and check for the correct answers. Grade it, and see how you scored. For every question you got wrong, go back and study it again and repeat the same steps. This will not only help you study better, it will help with test anxiety. Many students have a fear of taking tests and usually the fear of studying is also involved. There are coffee shops such as CC’s Coffee at 2800 Esplanade Ave. which is only about 2 miles away and The Bean Gallery that is walking distance from the school. These are two great places to study and finish homework with the kind of atmosphere you need for a clear mind.

Studying in a relaxing place
A great place for studying is at City Park. City park is open and free to the public. You can always find a nice, quiet spot somewhere underneath an oak tree or at one of the tables outside. This option is great for a person who loves the outdoors and needs that extra alone time. A whole lot of beautiful attractions and nice, crisp wind will truly put you at ease.

As you can see, there are many, many ways that a student can make studying alot easier as they travel through their college years. Just little tips like these, can show big results in each and every student who puts in that extra effort to overcome their study fears.
notes Ms. Hanegan. “We have lots of adjustments to make in the gallery concerning lighting. It will be a pretty involved process. We’ve never hosted anything quite like it, and it will be more of an experience than say simply coming in and looking at a painting.” Given the subject matter of this specific work, Ms. Hanegan believes Delgado “is a perfect venue to host this piece given how the school was affected (by Hurricane Katrina).

This time around, New Orleans will be hosting 27 artists from a wide range of countries like Chile, France, Italy, Japan, Poland, Sweden, the United States and Vietnam. Venues will include most of the museums in town, as well as universities, Longue Vue House and Gardens, and the newly opened New Orleans Healing Center. New to this biennial concept this year is the showing of works in Lafayette, which will be held at the Acadia Center For The Arts. Due to the massive scale of this four-month long event, many satellite exhibits organically spring up in diverse venues around the city at this time as well. Prospect New Orleans has embraced this idea, and as long as these exhibits have a fixed address and set hours they are officially promoted. Bars, restaurants, warehouses and schools are some of the hosts to these coinciding exhibits.

Prospect New Orleans displays contemporary art in traditional museum settings, as well as exciting, new and diverse contexts that truly allow an artist to come up with inspired work that would not be the same if hanging on a wall indoors. Keep an eye around town in the coming weeks, and one may get the feeling something big is coming to town. Cranes, port containers, and moving vans will be showing up in odd places and at odd hours to install works. You will be witnessing the beginning of another epic art endeavor that in its last go around brought the city of New Orleans 25 million dollars, 22,000 out of town visitors and 90,000 total admissions. This is Prospect.2, and New Orleans should hold its head high with pride and excitement over playing host to such a global artistic coming-together on our streets and in our venues.

Prospect.2 runs Oct. 22, 2011- Jan. 29, 2012
All exhibits are free and open to the public.

It has been said that there is no better way to learn than when you are able to get hands-on experience. Delgado’s Office of Service Learning oversees this hands-on method to give students real-life experience, while helping to meet needs in the surrounding communities.

“Service Learning takes academic course objectives and curriculum, skill sets learned in the classroom, and takes them to outside community needs,” said Matthew Sweeney, Service Learning Coordinator. “We encourage instructors and students to take their available skills and connect it to a specific community partner.”

The possibilities are endless with what can be done in the community to help further your education through service. During the 2011 Easter holidays, the Culinary department made decorated sugar cookies for children in area hospitals. Students in Horticulture help to save our coastline with wetlands projects.

“We have Occupational Therapy students that go to different spots, like NAMI [National Alliance for the Mentally Ill], New Orleans, the Children’s Club and Kingsley House, to work with a registered occupational therapist, but lead enrichment activities with them,” said Sweeney. “Speech Communications works to deliver presentations... from the ARC of Greater New Orleans.”

Delgado’s Service Learning is partnered with groups in our area, including Animal Rescue New Orleans, BuildNow, Head Start, Project Lazarus, Hoops of Hope and many more.

On Wednesday, Oct. 26 from 11 a.m. - 2 p.m., the Office of Service Learning is hosting Serve-A-Palooza, a community service fair, in the Student Life Center. There will be more than 40 agencies available with volunteer, internship and service learning opportunities. 2-Cent Entertainment will provide live performances during the event. There is also a raffle for a very special football to benefit the Service Learning organization. The football is autographed by the entire Saints Super Bowl XLIV Champions team, is being raffled to raise funds for Delgado’s Service Learning organization. Raffle tickets are only $1 each. The drawing will be held at the Serve-A-Palooza on October 26.

Kathryn Stockett’s, “The Help” continues to top The New York Times bestseller list at number one. The non-fiction novel revolves around a white socialite, the ambitious, Skeeter Phelan, and two black maids, the feisty Minny and very lovely Aibileen. Together the three women write a tell-all book about the perils of black domestic house servants in the 1960s Mississippi. As their tales create a buzz in the local black community, more servants come forward with their own accounts. “The Help” has gathered a lot of attention lately, as it is premiered as a drama film in August, opening to highly positive reviews.

Movies Under The Stars

New Orleans finally has a drive-in movie!

By Chelsey Tharp

Nola Drive-In was founded by Brantley Bissette and his wife Keri Bissette, who have always dreamed of having a drive-in theater. It is located at 840 Carondelet at St. Joseph on the rooftop of an old parking garage.

The drive-in doesn’t screen new released movies, but they do play the fun classics for all ages. They license every film, which means they pay for the right to screen each film they show, which costs $5 a person per movie.

Nola Drive-In provides FM transmitters that allow people to listen in their cars. They also have outside speakers for the people who walk, bike and scooter in with blankets and chairs. “A couple last screening brought a big inflatable couch,” Keri Bissette said.

Different food vendors are set-up for each showing, for example a taco or pizza truck. “We’ve seen a small BBQ going on, which was really cool,” Bissette said.

Shows are Saturdays one to two times a month. Search NolaDriveIn on Facebook or Twitter to find out their next movie showing and suggest your favorite movie, they may show it at the next event!

Carrie before the City

CW picks up hit series for prequel

By D’Corian Jackson

Since 1998, the hit series, Sex and the City has captivated audiences ranging from teens to adults. After the series finale and two successful movies, Sex and the City author, Candace Bushnell decided to revive her fashion savvy columnist, Carrie Bradshaw. Bushnell’s book, “The Carrie Diaries” introduces us to the young, aspiring writer still in high school! Recently, the CW Network green lighted the book to premiere as a television series. According to vulture.com, the producers of CW’s Gossip Girl will be at the helm of the show’s production. The Carrie Diaries series is set to follow Bushnell’s book where Carrie grows up in a small New England town, where teenagers are completely different from those in New York City. The writers of the series will also incorporate characters, traits and developments introduced on the Sex and the City series with the core source material. Get ready to be “Carried away” all over again!

A stolen silver infinity from Jefferson Parish was discovered in Lake Pontchartrain near Franklin Avenue during the early morning hours on Friday, Oct. 7. Police believe no one was in the vehicle when it crashed.
